

No reason to bring politics into campus — Mohd Fadzil

KOTA SAMARAHAN: There is no reason to bring politics into the campus when the University and University College Act (Auku) allows students to participate in it off-campus.

Universiti Malaysia Sarawak (Unimas) deputy vice-chancellor (Students Affairs) Prof Mohd Fadzil Abdul Rahman said students are in danger of neglecting their studies when they get too obsessed with what is going on in the political arena.

“It makes me sad and scared to see students obsessing over it to the point of disrupting their education and letting their parents down,” he said after launching the ‘Sukarelawan Inspirasi Kenyalang 2013’ programme yesterday.

Basing his observation on the bombardment of political media every time he goes online, Fadzil voiced his concern that it will distract them from giving their best in their studies and diminish their potential of giving back to society.

“Currently, there are no political activities on campus. If it happens, we will have a word with them first, and then take action if necessary,” he said.